This winter something terrible happened:
the little fawn lost his parents in a blizzard.

Without the ranger's care, the little fawn wouldn't have survived the winter.

He saw a hedgehog gathering apples. “Have you seen my parents, hedgehog? I lost them in a blizzard.”

“I haven’t, but try asking the hare. He runs around the whole forest.”

But even the hare couldn’t help. “I’ve covered every inch of these woods, but I’ve never seen your parents. Go and ask the squirrel. She climbs so high that she sees the whole forest.”
