MYSTERY FOREST

READ & LEARN

ALBATROS

In a snug wooden cabin nestled by the deep forest, lived Fia and her brother Rían with their daddy, a forester. He'd often say, „Without these trees, there'd be no cabin, no table, not even this campfire!“ as he dreamily added logs.

One night, as the fire dimmed, he said, „We need more sticks!“

Quickly, Rían dashed into the forest. „Don't go, Rían! You might get lost!“

Fia cried out, worried. She hurried after him, disappearing into the shadows of the dark forest.

„I'm scared!“ Rían whispered. Crooked, mossy trees loomed overhead, their long branches reaching like hungry fingers, snagging at the kids' coats. Tall ferns cast eerie shadows, while brambles and thistles clung to their trousers. Suddenly, Fia felt something wet in her boot. „Oh no, it's a swamp!“ she exclaimed, recalling her dad's warning. How would they find their way home? What if they never found their way home. Or worse, what if they drowned? „See those faint lights?“ Fia pointed, her voice trembling with fear. „That's the glow from rotting dead trees.“

The children's hopes were fading along with the setting sun. They had to find their way home!
„Our cabin's north of the forest. We could find north by Polaris, but so many stars have come out,“ Fia thought aloud. „Or we could use the lichens – they always grow facing north. But I can't see any in this darkness!“ Despair was creeping in fast. But now it was Rían's turn: he climbed the tallest oak tree.
From there, he spotted the wooden cabin and the flicker of his daddy's fire. „Look, there!“ he exclaimed.
They were saved! Guided by fireflies, they quickly gathered sticks and rushed home, deeply relieved.

„Daddy!“ they cried, rushing into his arms with an armful of sticks. „We’re so glad you’re here!“ He hugged them tightly. „I was so worried about you.“ He showed them how to properly arrange the sticks on the fire. Fia and Rían, a bit shaky but bursting with excitement, eagerly recounted everything they had seen in the forest. „Our forest is full of secrets,“ Daddy nodded, smiling. „I can’t wait to plant seedlings with you two in the springtime.“ He sighed dreamily over his cup of cocoa. Fia and Rían exchanged knowing glances. They couldn’t wait for more mysteries to uncover in their enchanting, beautiful forest.
